FSC certification stands for Forest Stewardship Council certification. It is a global organization that promotes responsible management of the world's forests. FSC certification is a way for companies to show that their products are made from materials sourced from well-managed forests, which means that the forests are harvested in a way that ensures they will continue to thrive and support biodiversity.

When it comes to board games, FSC certification can be important because it shows that the paper and other materials used in the game are sustainably sourced. This means that the game has been produced in a way that takes into account the long-term health of the planet and its forests. Choosing FSC-certified board games can help support sustainable forestry practices and reduce the demand for materials from unsustainable sources.
